Money-Saving Ideas In Selecting Cleaning Products

With the increasing array of "new" and "improved" cleaning products, and with generally rising prices, consumers can easily spend more and more on these cleaners.

One way to keep down the total cost of cleaning aids is to buy only cleaning products that can be used for more than one purpose. A few all-purpose or multi-purpose cleaners not only cost less, but also require less storage space than a collection of speciality cleaners.

Among the basic cleaners that can be used for many purposes are detergent and water. Water alone - particularly warm water - helps to dissolve and remove some soil. Light-duty and all-purpose detergents add to the cleaning power of water. Light-duty detergents - the type used for hand dishwashing - are mild and effective for cleaning lightly soiled areas and surfaces that might be damaged by stronger cleaners. All-purpose detergents - the type used for family laundry - contain an alkaline builder which makes them effective in removing grease and grimy dirt. Detergents will suds more than some other household cleaners and will require extra rinsing.

In soft water areas, soap jelly can be used for cleaning some surfaces.

To make soap jelly, shave 1 cup bar soap; dissolve in 1 quart boiling water. When cool, store in a jar.

Liquid chlorine bleach also has many uses in housekeeping. It helps remove stains, but can dully shiny porcelain finish and darken aluminum.

Three other basic cleanings are baking soda, household ammonia, and vinegar.

Baking soda, found among the baking supplies on grocery shelves, can be used to clean wall tile, porcelain enamel, and glass. When mixed with water, baking soda can remove coffee and tea stains from china and plastic dishes. Baking soda in water can also be useful in cleaning the inside of the refrigerator. The fine dry powder of baking soda can remove greasy food particles from the surface of ranges and other kitchen appliances without scratching.

Baking soda should not be used to clean aluminum articles, however, because it will darken them.

Baking soda costs about 1 cent per tablespoon. Generally 2 tablespoons of soda are used per quart of water.

Household ammonia is more powerful than baking soda. Used full strength, ammonia can help loosen the baked-on grease inside ovens. Diluted in water, ammonia can be used in such jobs as cleaning kitchen range burners, windows, and mirrors. Ammonia can be added to all-purose detergent and water and used a substitute for commercial liquid or spray all-purpose cleaners. Although ammonia is particularly useful for cutting grease in many cleaning jobs it can soften some of the older types of paint on walls and woodwork. Use only the amount of ammonia required to accomplish the task at hand.

Ammonia is a potentially dangerous product if used incorrectly. When misused, it can burn the skin and eyes. It is poisonous if swallowed. Therefore, it is especially important to store ammonia in its original container, and keep it away from children. Read and follow instructions on the label. Ammonia should never be mixed with chlorine bleach.

Household ammonia costs less than 1 cent per tablespoon. For general cleaning purposes, 1 tablespoon of ammonia diluted in 1 quart of water or ¼ cup of ammonia in each gallon of water is usually sufficient. You can make an effective cleaner for windows and mirrors with 1 tablespoon of clear ammonia in 1 quart of warm water. The amount needed for oven cleaning - about ½ cup of ammonia full strength - costs about 3 cents.

Vinegar is another mild cleaner which has some special cleaning ability. It will help remove hard water deposits from glassware, rust stains from sinks, and will help brighten darkened aluminum pots and pans. Vinegar can also be used in cleaning windows (1 tablespoon vinegar in 1 quart warm water).

Vinegar costs less than 1 cent per tablespoon, which is generally the amount used per quart of water.

"The South 40" by JAMES A. SMITH EXTENSION AGENT

Soil testing is still a vital function of any good soil fertility program. We should be reaching a point when we are willing to stop guessing and start testing.

Just because many farmers use strips to conserve the soil is no justification for not sampling. Generally samples for this year are running slightly higher pH than usual. However, during this same period we are seeing some that are very low.

In the first quarter of this year 233 samples have been tested compared with 260 a year ago. For calendar year 1976 there were 670 samples tested.

This year a fairly large number of samples have a pH of 7.0+. Less we forget, the pH can get too high. We should get pH levels to 6.2 -6.5 for all crops except tobacco and alfalfa.

High pH does four things: 1. reduce water percolation; 2. reduce growth of legumes and non-legumes; 3 reduce plant uptake of phosphorus and; 4. reduce micronutrient uptake of plants.

At the Annual Meeting of the South Central Feeder Pig Association Friday night there was a lot of optimism about hogs and their future. More than 100 producers and spouses participated in this Annual Meeting.

In 1976 area swine producers marketed 26,151 pigs. This was $404 more than a year earlier. Value of these pigs was $1,043,675.

This year starts out to be a record year in sales. In the first quarter 3000 more pigs were sold than the same time last year. Quality is also holding well; 54% graded 1's and 2's.

Statistics prove that it pays about $2.00 extra to dock pigs.

It was pointed out that producers need to do a better job of worming pigs. Worms are the prime reason for a pig grading #3 and selling for $6.00 less and also weighing less. Producers were reminded that a continued effort to upgrade the sow herd is very important.

Feeder pig producers heard enthusiastic reports of the successful check-off program- 2¢ per feeder pig and 5¢ per market hog.

At the Lynchburg Feeder Cattle Sale Thursday 1792 head sold for a high of 50c per pound. The sale for steers averaged $41.26 and heifers $33.43.

There a minimum of three steps that are essential for an acceptable lawn: 1. Apply fertilizer in fall. 2. Spray for weeds in fall. 3. Apply herbicide in spring for crabgrass control.

Delaying or omitting either of these steps affects the lawn quality. After all, the kind of lawn we have largely determines the outdoor environment we enjoy.

It is interesting to note that several Japanese seed producers will offer vegetable and flower varieties for 1978 planting that have received All-American medals.

If you produce steer feeder calves be sure they get a Ralgro implant. This will mean 25 more pounds at weaning. Calves this fall will be worth 45¢. Using Ralgro means another $11 profit. I like to think that Ralgro will pay for a bull replacement every three years. Here's how it might work. You have 20 steer calves that are worth $220 more at market time. If the usefulness of a bull is 3 years -- 3 X $220 = $660 and if the old bull is salvaged for $450 you have $1000 every three years to put into a new bull.

John Wilson holds his second production sale this Saturday. Swine producers will be interested in this event.
